'Lie' Probe Begins

90th YEAR, No. 127

A special committee of the tigating whether Transport-Minister Robert Strachan lied to the house over a manage-ment study of B.C. Ferries.

Its first witness was Lang-ley Socred Bob McClelland who at a noisy sitting Mon-day accused Strachan of lying when he said he had no knowledge of such a study.

The Socred refused to with-draw the accusation when asked by Speaker Gordon Dowding, and was ejected from the chamber for the re-

Shortages of antifreeze and snow tires have already begun to affect Victoria dealers.

"I haven't really been able to buy it (antifreeze) for three weeks," said Wayne Wrigley of Douglas St. Mohawk

THREE-STAGE To Arabs RATION PLAN FOR CANADA

OTTAWA — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald outlined Monday a three-stage oil rationing program that the government will implement if needed this winter.

He told the Commons supply interruptions have not occurred yet and the govern-ment does not know if the program will be required in whole, in part, or at all. But it is being prepared as a pre-

Macdonald also said the oil and gasoline supply situation should have clarified suf-ficiently by Nov. 23 to enable the government to decide whether emergency rationing measures will be necessary. The first stage would be li-mited to voluntary conservation measures by citizens, government and industry. It would be started the moment demand outstrips supply and could cope with a shortage of

Beyond a 10-per-cent shortage a "mandatory allocation program" would start at the wholesale level, obligating dealers to reduce deliveries to retail customers "by a per-centage equivalent to the sup-ply short-fall."

At 25 per cent, the govern-ment would adopt an emergency rationing program. Details were sketchy but Macdonald indicated it would mean individual rationing controlled by ration cards.

He said he does not know if ration cards have been printed yet, but they would be "a wise precaution" because of the time needed to put such a program into operation.

An energy department spokesman made clear that any rationing at this stage would only apply to oil, and not to natural gas or other forms of energy not in short

At the voluntary stage, federal, provincial and commercial buildings would cut temperatures three to five degrees and ventilation and airconditioning systems would be adjusted to lower the drain on

Homeowners would be asked to turn down thermostats three degrees but no one would be expected to keep temperatures below 70.

Times News Services The Arab policy of using oil as a political weapon paid off today as Japan and the Common Market countries issued statements backing the Arab cause against Israel.

Japan, facing a loss of 40 per cent of its entire oil imports due to the Arab oil production cutback, urged immediate Israeli withdrawals to territory held before the 1967 Middle East War.

The Japanese cabinet took the action at the request of Foreign Minister Masayoshi

While the cabinet was meet ing, government sources said the current oil crisis, particularly the 25-per-cent oil supply cut announced Monday by Arab nations, is forcing Arab nations, is forcing Japan to reorganize its entire economic policy "from the roots up."

.The sources in the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said cuts in electricity and oil rationing will force all Japanese industries to cut production and will put the country's international trade balance in the red.

In Brussels, in an attempt to prevent further Arab oil cuts, the nine European Com mon Market countries called on Israel to pull back to the Oct. 22 Middle East ceasefire

The Common foreign ministers also urged that any Middle East peace agreement be based on the 1967 United Nations resolution calling for Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory it oc-cupied in the 1967 war.

The ministers recognized the UN and its Security Council as the proper forum for dealing with the Middle East question and called for respect of the rights of Pales-

The ministers' statement appeared to lean considerably further to the Arab side than most popular opinion in the member countries, which has shown sympathy for the Israeli cause.

and air defence systems.

It was the first reported ceasefire violation on the Syrian front since the Oct. 22 ceasefire and coincided with Israeli reports of scattered fighting along the Suez Canal front where Israel said the ed the bank's error this way: Egyptian armed forces have Continued on Page 2

The Socred then said he had documents to prove a man-agement survey was already under way Oct. 11 and had been under way for seven days at that time.

"I have authorized no man-agement survey," Strachan replied. "There is no management survey taking place."

McClelland said Strachan lied and demanded he resign.

Debate ensued on Dowding's ruling that McClelland withdraw the statement and Premier Barrett defended the ruling, saying "a member's honor is at stake" and emphastatement and the issue are

Barrett said McCleiland could bring the matter up when he returned to the house by making a motion to debate the subject and "if a substantive (important) motion is placed it will be debated."

McClelland was never able to place the motion, however, since Macdonald's motion to refer to committee supersed-ed it when the house sat again in the evening.

Barrett said outside the house that McClelland was not allowed to place his motion because he had spoken to the press during the afternoon and "destroyed the traditional validity of the substantive mo-

Documents which McClelland later tabled in the house and letters Strachan gave to the press, show that a $39,000 management study, to be undertaken by Frank R. Machin and Associates of Victoria, was approved by the B.C. Ferry Authority on Oct. 4.

Strachan's contention, how-ever, is that he did not know of the study, and when he found it had been taking place, on Nov. 1, he ordered it stopped immediately.

McClelland responded to Strachan's explanation by saying he couldn't understand that a minister would not know what was happening in his department and if didn't know there must be "some degree of incompetence" in that department provincial ment's action in raising the B.C. minimum wage to $2 an hour from $1.50 last year has resulted in higher prices but relatively few layoffs, a labor department report says.

The report, written by labor department researcher Frank Rhodes, was tabled in the legislature Monday by Labor Minister Bill King.

The survey was conducted among B.C. employers in the lower-paying industries, involving about 100,000 employees of the labor force.

The number of responding firms — 1,029 — represented about 37,000 employees.

The study showed only 5 per cent of the responding firms said they had laid off employees as a direct result of the minimum wage being increased. Only 364 employees were laid off, or about 1 per cent of the total number of employees affected.

About 21 per cent of the employers polled said they had refrained from hiring additional employes because they would have to be paid at the higher rate. The number of jobs held back was put at about 500.

The minimum wage in B.C. was raised from $1.50 to $2 an hour in December of 1972. A further increase of 25 cents an hour to $2.25 goes into effect Dec. 3 of this year and a final raise to $2.50 an hour will take place next June 3.

For workers under 18, the minimum wage is now $1.60 and will go to $1.85 on Dec. 3 and to $2.10 next June.

The report said 4,762 employees in the responding firms got pay raises as a result of the minimum wage increase. Another 3,412 got in-creases in order to be paid more than other employees in their firms.

Regarding employees under 18, the responding firms said 154 young employees were hired who would otherwise not have gotten jobs. About 78 per cent of those firms who responded said they felt the special rates for under-18s were unnecessary.

As for effects of the wage increase on the firms polle most said they increased their prices in order to compensate themselves. The report said it would be impossible to measure the exact extent of price increases.

Other methods of dealing with the increase included a small number of layoffs, reduced profits, an increase in efficiency of employees and a cut-down in the amount of overtime worked.

The report said another study should be done on the effects of the minimum wage once the further increases are

It predicted employers will use the same methods of dealing with further increases as they did with the first.

of crude oil by Arab producers has served to give the world a preview of the global shortage which faces mankind within a few years. The shortage was beginning to be felt in any case, as almost every developed country increased its oil consumption to meet growing industrial demands and new needs resulting from a higher standard of living among the people.

Canada and the United States are in a relatively fortunate position, due to the natural resources of this continent. With restraint in use, only a small proportion of oil must be imported. The catch, of course, is that - particularly in the case of the United States - restraint is increasingly difficult to exercise. Predictions of future use put consumption well beyond the capacity of domestic sources.

In the case of Europe and Japan, the dependence on imported oil is much greater - almost total. It is there that Arab refusal to sell can exert a very serious effect - as Holland is finding out. Two hurdles stand in the way of severe Arab cutbacks, One is the

The other — a difficult one to define is the point at which some highly industrialized and strong country will find its very existence threatened by the contrived oil shortage. Then it might well resort to desperate measures - invasion perhaps — in an effort to survive.

The current rather critical situation undoubtedly will give a great impetus to the development of nuclear energy, or any other alternative to oil. If large countries are faced with a shortage within a relatively few years in any case, due to consumption of the planet's petroleum resources, it will be reasoned that life will be too precarious if these final years are to be spent under various threats or actual cut-offs by producing countries. And this condition, of course, would intensify as the age of oil came nearer to its end. The answer, then, will be to turn to nuclear sources now rather than strated that the industry will be run only by giants for the rest of its existence. This may result in moves by national governments to set up trading structures of competent size to deal with the great companies. Canada's current experience with Venezuela may be a preview of this.

Even as Ottawa was discussing creation of a large Crown agency to handle imports, exports and rates, Venezuela expressed a preference for dealing with such a government-controlled medium rather than with individual importing companies. This apparently will be the form of control to be exercised as the planet's oil dwindles and an era of unprecedented industrial expansion based largely on petroleum comes to an end.

Long before that date, of course, the substitute energy forms will have been thrown into use. But the whole concept gives mankind a new feeling of isolation on its tiny speck in space, and a sense of ultimate physical end which has not heretofore been given much attention in a world that has known only rapid expansion of production and consump-

Critical Look at a Birthday

"... well ... HE got a raise ... why shouldn't I ...?"

ada had a big birthday a while back the 100th anniversary of the founding of the country's first national labor organization, the Canadian Labor Union, in Toronto on Sept. 23, 1873.

If you overlooked it, don't send a sorry card. The event was allowed to pass with a minimum of fuss even in labor circles. Things being what they are these days, Big Labor would just as soon you didn't notice.

The reason is simple enough. Even after 100 years, the labor unions are still not popular. Indeed, to a politically significant number of Canadians, they are not even acceptable. Every time the Gallup Poll asks that question, "What do you think is the most important problem facing this country today?" the response of "labor unions, strikes" is always high on the list. The most recent poll showed 13 per cent of the voters thought so, second to "economic inflation and high prices." It is a fair guess that for many, the two problems are really synony

The key word here, of course, is "strikes." Although many strikes take place because of management intransigence over fundamentals, such as a refusal to bargain collectively, the noticeable ones - the ones that stick in the public mind - are almost always over wages. In such cases, the impression is easily gained that the union is asking for more than the employer can afford to pay, at least not without increasing the price of his product; otherwise, would he not pay and avoid a costly

When the strike is finally settled, at something more than what the wor were demanding when it began, and product prices are subsequently raised, the public naturally blames the unions for the inflationary effect. This is so even when there is no strike but the employer has agreed to higher wages and subsequently cited them as justification for price increases.

This may be grossly unfair to the unions, but there is enough truth in it to cause labor to lose support with its small-l "liberal" constituency. Even Sen. Maurice Lamontagne, a leader of the small-l liberals if there ever was one, complained in a Winnipeg speech recent-

If one sets aside the draconian solution of wage and price controls, the only answer appears to be the outlawing of strikes and the institution of a sy tem of compulsory arbitration of industrial disputes. But the unions are much opposed to this idea and they are politically potent enough to deter governments from introducing it, except, of course, in certain situations such as hospitals and other essential public services.

Labor's opposition to compulsory ar bitration has always been, at least in its stated form, a curious one. The standard initial objection, for example, is that it is fatuous to think that strikes can be abolthat workers will strike regardless of what the law says if they think their terms and conditions are unjust. The Australian experience is often cited in this connection; Australia has binding arbitration and five times as many illegal strikes as there are legal strikes in

It is, of course, trite to say that unjust laws - or laws which large masses of people perceive to be unjust - are nopriously difficult and perhaps impossible to enforce. But there is no inherent reason to pre-suppose that compulsory arbitration means injustices: that is a kage-jerk assumption by labor which no doubt arises out of bitter experience with the criminal and civil concepts of jus-

It is perhaps worth remembering in this regard that under these concepts of justice, labor unions were once considered criminal conspiracies in restraint of trade and commerce, that the courts are still enjoining them not to do this or not to do that, that the legal doctrines on private property and freedom of person are antagonistic to labor's efforts to bring employers to terms by closing down their plants.

Indeed, if one scratches a union leader deeply enough, one invariably finds that his real objection of compulsory arbitration lies in his suspicion of a socioeconomic-political system which has had to be fought all the way, and which even today appears to him to be loaded against labor's interests. Would the arbitrators appointed to "labor courts," he asks in effect, be any different from the judges who sit in the criminal and civil

Labor Courts

But all this, surely, rests on a misunderstanding. The whole purpose of a system of "labor courts" — a most unfortu-nate term, but "board" or "tribunal" is no better - is to get labor out of the regular courts and to create a body of law which would be unique and particular to labor relations alone. Whether such a body of law would be "just" for labor would depend on the nature of the principles, rules and procedures which cons tute it, and on the fair and equal application thereof.

Labor is not being asked to accept compulsory arbitration without knowing in advance what this body of law would be. It already knows much of what it would contain and how it would work because it has already been developed, in response to experience and labor pressure, in existing labor codes - the principle of union security, the rules of certification, the concept of the collective contract, and so on. Indeed, one can say that the body of law is virtually complete except for three key areas: there is no clear understanding on what it means to bargain "in good faith"; there is no agreed-upon concept of what is bargainable, and there are not enough accepted standards for arbitrators to apply in the event that compulsory arbitration replaces the strike. In these areas, the doctrime that might is right still applies.

There is no reason why these gaps cannot be filled in. But that requires initiative and input from organized labor, and organized labor, apparently, prefers to live in 1873.

Impeachment: What It Means

NEW YORK - Ought Richard Nixon to be impeached? If so, for what?

In order to answer those questions sensibly, impeachment has to be under stood for what it is, not for what it sounds like. Impeachment would not mean the conviction of Nixon for any thing. It would not constitute his removal from office. It would not be an action that necessarily would result in a guilty verdict, or in his removal from office Impeachment need not be an allegation, & even, that Nixon has committed criminal Impeachment is no more than a formal charge brought by a majority of the House of Representatives against a president or any "civil officer" of the United States, and upon which he or she must stand trial by the senate. Even if impeached, the official in question is presumed innocent and the burden of proof lies upon the accusers. Conviction may be obtained only upon a two-thirds vote of Senators voting upon the issue, and only after a trial governed by well-established rules of procedure.

Chief Justice Rules

If a president is being tried, the tribumal must be presided over by the Chief Justice of the United States, who would rule upon disputed points of procedure. subject to a majority vote of the senate on appeal. If the official being tried is found guilty, the only penalty that can be Jevied is his or her removal from office although ordinary legal prosecution can later be pursued if the facts warrant).

The comparison often is drawn between impeachment and the process by which private citizens are indicted by a grand jury. That is a reasonably close analogy to impeachment, but there is one sharp difference; the private citizen is supposed to be indicted only for specific violations of specific statues, while a president or other civil officer may be impeached for less specific "high crimes and misdemeanors.'

Thus, impeachment is a "method of national inquest into the conduct of public men"-as Alexander Hamilton wrote in The Federalist (No. 65). Impeachment provides a political remedy for political offences, a redress for public wrongs by public men; and precedents going far back into English law show that a "high" crime is an act against the state as opposed to an act against a private

James Iredell of North Carolina, an early Supreme Court Justice, said in debate on ratification of the Constitution that the occasion for impeachment would "arise from acts of great injury to the community." Hamilton put it (again in The Federalist (No. 65)) that impeach-able offences "relate chiefly to injury done immediately to the society itself.'

"The power to impeach, then, is not so sweeping as Rep. Gerald Ford would have it-"an impeachable offence iswhatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history.'

A president may not be impeached for having a mistress or being profate. But neither is impeachment so limited as to demand, as some argue today, evidence or allegations of a specific act by Nixon that, were he a private citizen, would be grounds for criminal indictment by a grand jury:

All this being the historical case, there are ample grounds upon which to impeach Nixon. According to Jefferson's manual, in fact, the House could even proceed to do so without further investigation, since "common fame is a good ground for the House to proceed by inquiry, and even to accusation.

The common fame of Richard Nixon, after the last six months, is indisputably that he may well have committed the high crime of "acts of great injury to the community" as well as "injuries done immediately to the society itself." That is to say that the House clearly would be justified in charging Nixon with such acts and injuries, whether or not he could ultimately be convicted in the Sen-

Specific Changes

The specific counts might be many; but could logically include charges that in 1970 he approved an internal security plan that authorized violations of the law; later established in the White House a secret police force; made unlawful use of the F.B.I. and the C.I.A.; illegally wiretapped his own aides and four newspapermen; and tried to bribe Federal Judge Matthew Byrne by offering him the directorship of the F.B.I. On another level, charges might also be brought concerning the unauthorized bombing of Cambodia - not just as a criminal act, but as the "high crime" of Constitutional perversion.

It follows that if these charges could be brought on the basis of Nixon's "common fame," they should be, in order either to establish his innocence or to remove him from office. He has himself repeatedly asserted, through his attorneys, that the appropriate - indeed the - remedy for the abuse of Presidential power is impeachment. And that remedy must be sought when the question arises - in the words of George Mason of Virginia - "Shall any man be above justice? Above all, shall that man be above it, who can commit the most extensive injustice?"

operation is the obstacle. Many responsible pet owners on fixed or minimal incomes cannot afford current high prices. The solution hopefully lies with the newly formed Greater Victoria Animals' Crusader's plan for moderate cost spaying and neutering. This long over-due project will be a tremendous benefit to all pet owners and the . community as a whole.

Spaying and neutering offer many advantages for the pet owner himself. His cat or dog will not attract packs of male animals, nor is it inclined to roam but rather contents itself to stay closer to home, is more affectionate, playful and gentler of nature. The notion that a spayed or neutered animar will become fat and lazy is an old wives' tale, as is the idea a female must have a litter

The responsibility will always rest ith the pet owner himself, regardless of whatever facilities are available. Owning a pet should be a privilege, not a right, and because it has no voice but ours and cannot help itself, it is up to us to act humanely and responsibly on its behalf. R. J. # What Do Tories Really Think?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA - On initial examination, the Progressive Conservative proposals on wage and price controls— strikes most of us as bold and imaginative. At the least, it put some polarization into the fuzzy debate over our economic ills being carried on by our

The Tory forthrightness had two early advantages: It didn't necessitate identifying the causes of inflation, and it was an instant placebo for rising prices.

The serious disadvantage to the Tory proposal is this: A simplistic idea has short legs. after its initial reach, people start thinking about it. The press picks at it. Experts of all kinds and sorts start punching holes in it. They may not have anything better with which to fill the holes in Thus—as seems true with the Tory proposals -they are hanging in public not thoroughly elabor ated by its sponsors.

Though riddled by critics the latter have nothing much to offer as a contrast.

During the 1972 election campaign, the Tories timidly the proposition wage and price controls might be necessary in an emergency inflation situation. During the following winter, with increas-ing inflation and high unemployment, the Stanfield people were forced to be a little more specific.

They proposed a 90-day reeze on wages and prices. The freeze was seen by its arrest soaring prices. Unluck- as to what the Tories are pro-by their rivals that their ideas were not working in the U.S. forced the Tories into further refinements.

In September, Paul Hellyer began to speak about guidelines rather than controls, and these only on a selective basis. (This fits the Hellyer discovery that the chief villains are big unions and big corporations.)

The Conservative caucus' financial thinker, Jim Gillies, was more specific, perhaps because of some economic training. He presented the freeze as a temporary mea-sure, giving a Tory govern-ment enough time to come up with an incomes policy. He defended his generalities by citing the need to consult the provinces. labor leaders, consumer groups, and leaders of business and agriculture. one," he said, "certainly not I, believes that you can magically freeze prices and solve Robert Stanfield has always been known as cautious. He obviously didn't accept the ar-guments of Hellyer and Gilthem. In an October interview, Stanfield promised that if he becomes prime minister he "will use the federal power to freeze prices and incomes for 90 days and then institute two years." The irony is that the Liberals, after months of deriding the Tory scheme, are looking more closely at their own antiinflation contingency plans, one of them being temporary wage and price control. Should they take this route, it's a certainty that elections are just around the corner. Impotent at containing infla-tion while in power, the Liberals know they need a gim-mick to tide them over an election campaign. Whether they would follow through if they retained power is another matter.

Unfortunately, after last year's election, the NDP took out membership in the tinkers' union. Instead of tinkers' union. Select Senate Committee on Presidential Campaign Activ ties, Senators Sam Ervin and Howard Baker, Jr., helicop-tered into Fordham the other evening, for 17 minutes of speaking and 75 minutes of question-answering and walked off with $5,000. Some regarded it as a rip-off in the style of that well-known Fordham alumnus, G. Gordon

Each was scheduled to speak for 30 minutes. Baker managed seven minutes; Ervin 15. The question period was to agreed time limit.

The first question laid it on the line. "How come," a student asked, "to find out what people are thinking here, you have to get the outrageous fees of $2,500 apiece?" (Baker had remarked in his seven-

Incidentally, the Ervin-Baker show attracted an au-dience of 3,100. The next day Mike Harrington (The Other America; The Accidental Cen-America; The Accidental Century; Socialism, etc.) spoke at Fordham on the separate themes of the overthrow of Allende and the relationship between the energy crisis and the failure of government. # Overcoats With Dinner

During the two winters we lived in London there was no heat at all to speak of anywhere in that whole vast gray conurbation. Or so it seemed to Americans already conditioned by their new imperial wealth to excesses of everything, including room heat. This was 1954, of course. Nowadays London is as much at ease with central heating as White Plains or Chevy Chase, but at that time — twilight of empire and all that — it could be a cold place when winter came.

It was not the kind of cold you think of when the government asks you to turn your thermostat down two or three degrees to save heating fuel. That kind of cold would have seemed dangerously hot to many Englishmen of the early

At that time England still retained the habit of positive thinking acquired during World War II. One instinctively made a virtue of unpleasant necessity. Thus, absence of central heating wasn't much thought of as a hardship, but rather as a boon to health. It was a superstition widely held, and even by occasional doctors, that central heating caused colds and the flu.

What central heating did exist in London's newer buildings rarely seemed to work, and when it did, it was rarely powerful enough to warm a bare hand at rest on the radiator. What I am trying to suggest is that London was one cold city. It was the kind of cold that, when you woke in the morning, filled the bedroom almost as solidly as a block of ice. under the blankets, breath turning to steam around us as we struggled with frigid woolens that would help us sur

And the whole city was pretty much this way, millions and millions of Londoners, and almost all of them - by American standards - freezing cold. It sounds miserable, and once in a while it was, but mostly it wasn't. It was mostly just another way to live, and not a bad shock, we learned to cope with it, and then, with the great feast of London for a distraction, learned to take it for

It was, in fact, pleasant in a way, because it made London seem more alieh, more remote from rich, heated America. One was aware of being part of a different way of life, of doing some thing faintly heroic.

Coping with a fuel crisis did not require great originality. Our living room grate burned soft coal. This cast a globe of warmth perhaps eight feet into the room. In this cramped area—couch, armchairs and lamps all shoved together—the formal society of the household was conducted.

At home there was a lot of tea. It was used as human antifreeze. Also, the steaming kettle on the stove warmed the kitchen. A lot of the household's informal society was conducted over the stove.

Everyody wore woollens, of course, and always a sweater or two in the house, or at least in the rooms that had some kind of heat. There were also electric heaters, which gave a heat so intense in such a concentrated area that they seemed likely to set off fire by spontaneous combustion. These were aimed at the bed just at the retirement hour, so that it would feel less like are Arctic wasteland on entry, and were turned off before the lights went out, for reasons of both safety and economy. The cost of electricity was stupendous.

On very cold days we might put on an overcoat before walking from a heated room into a room without heat. Children were as rigorously trained to shut doors behind them as, back in America, their peers were being trained to use the toilet. Children still in the crawling stage were kept in snowsuits to prevent them from turning blue. It was cold down on those floors, what with heat's propensity for floating up to

A woolen scarf was worn during most waking hours, sometimes even in offices and restaurants, which seemed to be just as cold as everywhere else.

Some evenings in the restaurants of Soho the diners would all be sitting there working on their mixed grills, very poised in that proper, handsome English way, and all of them wrapped to the ears in overcoats and scarves. I do not remember, however, ever see anyone eating at the fancier restaurants with gloves on

You easily developed all these habits, which now seem odd, but which didn't seem at all funny at the time, but just practical, and life didn't really seem any worse or any better because rooms got winter into them. That was just another way the world was in some

Now, of course, we have all been spoiled a little. Unlike the English of those long ago winters, we are not likely to make a virtue of necessity if the central heating goes cool. No. We are more likely to have verigeance on the government and offer bigger boons to the fuel furnishers, in the delusion that the good life has something to do with the good life has something to do with not sitting down to dinner in your over-

89 NOBEL WINNERS PROTEST 'HARASSMENT'

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — Eighty-nine Nobel prize win-ners signed an appeal sent Monday to Soviet authorities on behalf of physicist Andrei Sakharov and novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

It is probably the broadest and most prestigious list of signers of any of the collec-tive protests made against the recent repression of Soviet dissent, symbolized by harassment of the two men.

The list includes laureates who have been held in high regard by the Soviets. Among them is Linus Pauling, the American who won the 1954 prize in chemistry, the 1962 peace prize, and a Lenin peace prize as well. Another is Haldor Laxness, the Icelander who won the 1955 prize for literature. for literature.

Other signers of unusual note even by Nobel standards included Werner Heisenberg, one of the inventors of quantum mechanics; Robert Hol-ley, Har Gobind Khorana and Marshall Nirenberg, the men who unravelled the genetic code of the NDA enzyme in the human body; Paul Samuelson, the American economist, and George Wald, the

Allow Teachers Free Choice-MLA

Social Credit MLA Harvey Schröeder argued strongly against compulsory mem-bership in the B.C. Teachers Federation, but voted for it. anyway when the bill came up in the legislature Monday.

Amendments to the Public Schools Act drew the ire of opposition members. Only Oak Bay Conservative Scott Wallace voted against the changes when the house gave approval in principle.

Schroeder, of Chilliwack, said there may be teachers opposed to joining the federa-tion as a matter of conscience and they should be allowed to opt out under terms of the labor code now awaiting third and final reading.

, School Act changes were passed in second reading 44-1 with Social Credit and Liberal members siding with the NDP

Schroeder said he did not believe in compulsion and pointed out nearly all teachers ined the organization during the two years it was voluntary, because the advantages outweigh the costs anyway.

While the BCTF convention last spring voted to re-institute compulsory membership, he said, only 10 per cent of the province's teachers were represented there and a con-sensus of all teachers should be taken before the legislation is passed.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said compulsory mem-bership was being re-es-tablished to permit the group to enforce professional stan-dards more readily.

"We feel very strongly that the teachers are a profes-sional organization," she said. BCTF membership was mandatory for 25 years before the Socreds threw it out in 1971 because of political action taken by the federation against the government. Other criticisms voiced by Schroeder included charges of undemocratic election regula-tions, included in the bill to make it comply with the new Municipal Act.

The new legislation will allow only residents of a school district to vote in school board elections and ref-erendums, eliminating absentee and corporate votes and giving only one vote to each resident.

FOR MAYOR OF SAANICH

From the Wizard of Avis:

some practical magic for people who don't rent cars.

If you don't rent cars, chances are it's because you think you can't afford to. Well, that's where the Wizard of Avis comes in. He has a flat daily rate with no mileage charge. It's a little magic that turns car renting from something that's too expensive into practical, affordable transportation for everybody. Here's how you could experience a sparkling new Avis car.

Let's say you're a businessman who does a lot of flying. When you arrive at your destination, you use a limousine to get downtown, cabs to go from meeting to meeting, then when it's time to go home, you take another limousine back to the airport. This adds up to a lot of money so instead you rent a sparkling new Plymouth Fury III for a day, cover all your calls, drive 87 miles and pay just $17.00 plus gas. That's less than you'd probably pay for limousines and cabs.

> 1 day and 87 miles for just $17.00 plus gas.

Or suppose you live in a big city high-rise. You don't own a car, but you do like to get away to the country at weekends. You used to take the bus or train to get to there until you heard about the Wizard's flat daily rate. So you pick up a new Plymouth Satellite on Friday noon, keep it until Monday 9 A.M. and drive all the miles you want for just $32.00 and gas. (That's 21/2 days for the price of two—with no mileage charge in the bargain.)

Maybe you're a salesman. You have your own car which you normally drive on all sales calls. But then you hear about the Wizard's flat daily rate with no mileage charge. It doesn't take you too long to figure out that driving a new Avis car on long trips makes a lot more sense than using the family car. So you rent a new Plymouth Duster, make seven calls, do 410 miles and keep the car for two days for just $30.00 and gas. Aside from the extra convenience, you even find that your mileage covers the best part of the rental!

> 2 days and 410 miles for just $30.00 plus gas.

The Wizard's Flat Daily Rate. So economical, it can make carrenting practical for you. Shouldn't you phone the number at the base of this ad for a reservation?

Avis rents all makes of fine cars, features Plymouth and Dodge. These rates available in major centres across Canada.

see even if I can't see the reason.

The first thing to watch is how much each rock curls on each turn, and on each part of the sheet of ice you are using. A difference as slight as an inch or two in the broom can mean a difference of a foot or two in where the rock comes to On keen ice, reading the ice is reasonably easy. It requires total concentration throughout the game because the ice is constantly changing. On the first couple of ends before the pebble is worn down, rocks will act differently than later can have more of an affect than the ice. Every curler's delivery is slightly different.

Ideally you would like to have a rink with everybody having essentially the same delivery, so that you can read everything in terms of your own shot.

Some curlers never hit the broom, so the important thing is to watch where they come out in delivering the rock. Watch the different throwing characteristics. Some slide inside the broom and throw out at the broom. Others seem come out straight, but flick the rock wide in releasing it. Still others put on an abnormal amount of turn.

Take into consideration the release point. The farther the rock has to travel, the more opportunity it has to curl, so a long slider's rock will not curl as much as one delivered right from the hack, or in the middle of the rings.

These are all things the skip must take into consideration

Aussie Pros Reluctant To Exchange Golf Ideas

A tan and her first taste of international competition were Dale Shaw's most pleasant acquisitions in Australia, but there was also a teaching revelation for the Victoria women's Dale returned Sunday after helping represent Canada in the five-nation International Cup series in Sydney. Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, Barbara Turnbull of Saskatoon and Toronto's Elizabeth Hoffman completed the Canadian lineup.

Dale and Marilyn were the big winners. Each won two of their four singles and combined for a half and two victories in foursomes play.

The Canadians could manage only a half point by holding the winning Australia team to a 3-3 draw. Still, the Canadians played much better than the last-place finish may indicate. A different scoring system, giving credit for singles and four-somes victories, would have placed the Canadians higher.

The series also attracted players from New Zealand, Great Britain and Japan and the Canadian girls rated highly in at least one department. Aussie pros were very impressed

One pro, transplanted Englishman Brian Twite, discusseding techniques with both Dale and Marilyn. That resulted

"He seemed delighted, almost surprised, to find we were willing to discuss our swings with him," said Dale. "Twite said golf professionals in Australia and England rarely dis-cuss techniques and swings with each other."

Dale also competed but missed qualifying for the Australian women's championship in Melbourne, by one stroke. But in Melbourne and Sydney she had a chance to watch and play against Jane Lock.

The 18-year-old is Australia's "whiz kid" in women's golf. Miss Lock has lost only two singles matches this year, the most recent was Malsie Mooney's victory over her in the Australian final.

"She's a super-confident junior," said Dale

The Ladies' Professional Golf Assocation will introduce a rule in 1974 designed to improve the performances of golfers on the tour.

The men have their tour "rabbits"-players who follow the tour and attempt to qualify each week—so does this mean we'll have to call the distaff hopefuls "bunnies?"

And winding up "ladies' day" is the new executive of the Vancouver Island Division of the CLGA.

The incoming president is Daima Mann, who succeeds Esther Barnes. Vice-presidents are Flo MacIntyre and Port Alberni's Toni Bishop, the only non-Victorian named to the directorate.

Also named to the executive were Florence Hives (secretary), Muriel Eldridge (treasurer), Daphne Dagg (course rating), Hattle Peters (handicap and rules), Irene Horne (teams and publicity) and Marjorie Campbell (junior development.)?

Reserve Clause Target Again

OTTAWA (CUPI) - Consumers Affairs Minister Herb Gray introduced an amendment to the Combines Investigation Act Monday which would limit the reserve clause in amateur and professional

A provision in the new bill brings professional and amateur sports under its terms for the first time and while it does not outlaw the reserve clause, it would allow a player to take any dispute to clause that states the player cannot join another team in the same league during or after the life of his contract unless he is released or sold by the team which owns him.

The reserve clause was designed to protect the poorer teams from having their players attracted to richer teams by offers of better players' contracts.

"If the affiliation of players to a team were to be determined only by pocket books of the teams, the wealthier professional and many a teams would wind up with all the best players and the league would not be viable," a consumer and corporate affairs department statement said.

Gray said his proposed amendments would "make it easier for people who move from amateur to professional sports to have a better choice of teams to play with. It limits such things as the re-serve clause."

Gray said if a player found his ability to play for the team of his choice has been by unreasonable terms in his contract, he can

The new bill states it would be an indictable offense to conspire or to arrange:

• "To limit unreasonably the opportunities for any person to participate as a player or competitor in professional or amateur sports or to im-pose unreasonable terms or conditions on those persons who so participate.

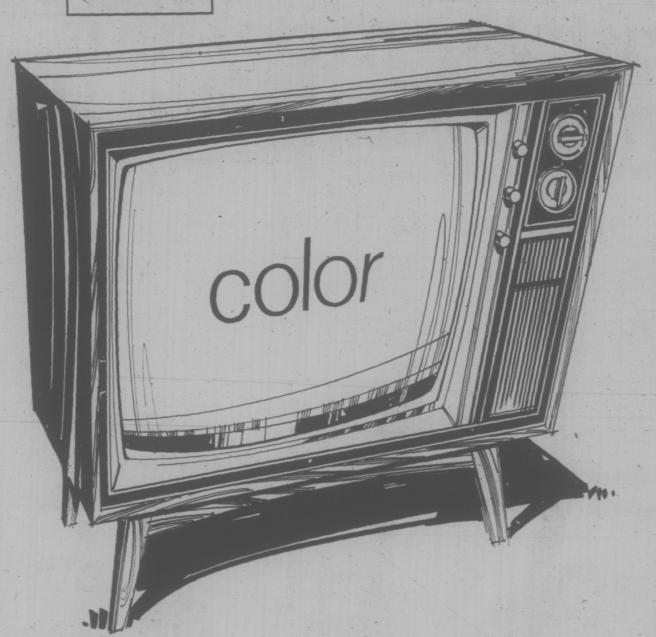

"To limit unreasonably the opportunity for any other person to negotiate with and, if agreement is reached, to play for the team or club of his choice in a professional or amateur league."

The amendments exempt arrangements that relate exclusively to the granting and operating of franchises within the same league.

In considering the agreements to determinal whether a violation of the act has occurred, the court would be instructed to investigate whether the sport is organized on an international basis and whether the terms drawn up in another country should be in another country should be applicable in Canada.

Arsonist Blamed For Hotel Fire

VANCOUVER (CP) - Five men who perished in the Com-mercial Hotel fire here Oct. 21 were deliberately killed by an arsonist, a coroner's jury sion of a three-day inquest.

The jury of three men and three women ruled that the deaths of John MacKenzie, Kenneth Parsons, Arthur Stevenson, Walter Wolanek and Peter Halderson were "unnatural and homicidal."

City fire investigators believe the fire was set with a flammable liquid—possible paint thinner—by dumping it along the fourth floor hallway and in a women's washroom, where the fire begun.

John Henry Kacer told the ing a beer in the Commercial Hotel beer parlor two nights before the fire when he heard a long-haired blond youth threaten to "burn this dump and others like it down.'

He said the youth ignited a package of matches and threw them on the floor at the time he made the threat. Kacer said the incident was

The case of 14 persons da, an charged in connection with a O'Brien. off the northwest coast of Vancouver Island last sum-mer bogged down in legal arguments Monday, when the hearing opened in provincial court before Judge J. N. Bart-

The hearing was adjourned until today for defence arguments that proceedings against U.S. citizens among the accused cannot be taken wiffout parmisers of the company of th without permission of the at-torney-general of Canada.

Indians Attack Housing

VANCOUVER (CP) - The British Columbia Association of Non Status Indians Monday called for a full scale federal investigation of the Department of Indian Affairs Indian reserve housing program.

In a news release, association president Fred House charged that houses constructed by the department are "poorly designed" and are "wooden time bombs." He said a weekend fire on an Indian reserve near Lytton, in the Fraser Canyon, which killed six persons living in a new DIA house, "is an example of how the depart-ment is helping Indians to death.'

Fire broke out when an oil stove apparently overheated and exploded.

Mr. House charged that too much of the department's housing budget is spent to pay the salaries "of an army of bureaucrats who duplicate each others' work and leaves little money for actual home construction."

This results in overcrowding of existing and new re-serve houses, he added.

Vancouver Tax Jump Laid to Gov't, Labor

VANCOUVE R (CP) — Members of Vancouver City Council Monday received the preliminary 1974 city budget of $117 million, which would require a property tax increase of 17.2 per cent.

Alderman Fritz Bowers, chairman of the finance and administration committee, said the 17.2 per cent tax increase - twice the jump from 1972 to 1973 — is based in part on incomplete or uncertain

He said the increase as-sumes the British Columbia government will not boost its per-capita grant next year, and said the increase takes a pessimistic view of labor negotiations now starting.

Bowers declined to say what the prediction is for salary increases.

The 1974 budget totals $116.9 million, or $117.2 million when regional hospital figures are Last year Vancouver had its first $100 million-plus budget at $102.9 million, or $104.2 million including hospital figures: Bowers said the 17.2 per cent property tax increase is intolerable but unless the provincial government relieves the property taxpayer of educational costs, the city will have to demand correction of inequities in provincial supjustice and health and wel-

Mayor Peter Pollen didn't attend. And that just may have been the wisest decision he's made during his entire two-year term of office.

The so-called all-candidates meeting at the Newcombe Auditorium Monday night was strictly one to miss. The sort of occasion that leaves one reeling from a massive overdose of boredom.

In Britain the bonfire re-vellers were out in force, ob-serving November the Fifth with the traditional burning of Guy Fawkes' effigy and an orgy of fireworks.

But meanwhile, back at the Newcombe, the entire 90-minute meeting didn't gener-ate enough friction to ignite one mini-sparkler.

True, a clash of dates didn't help. As Kenneth Lines, president of the sponsoring James Bay Community Association pointed out, there was a com-peting event that evening at the nearby James Bay United

Was he, though, just a little too kind in finding excuses for a turnout of less than 30?

The nearest it came to any heat, this demonstration of democracy at work, was in the very closing minute when a would-be alderman asked an incumbent alderman what was, by any yardstick, a loaded question. Henry Bitterman asked Ald.

Mike Young, a lawyer, whether he is involved with a "group in this city . . . that is purchasing tracts of land for parking areas.'

Young had issued a after Young had issued a firm denial, saying the only group he was connected with was city council, Ald. Alf Hood leaped to his feet in the audience and protested the guestion was "a damn disgreece".

Hood said such personal at-tacks were surfacing not only in the city for the first time but also in neighboring munic ipalities - an indication that polities had descended to "a very sad state of affairs.

And that was it. End of excitement, end of meeting.

There was no other heck-ng. The only sign of audience reaction, apart from the mandatory polite clapping as each candidate's name was called, was a sort of disbeliev-ing gasp when Bitterman suggested public facilities such as the McPherson Playhouse and Memorial Arena be closed down if they can't make money.

Fellow-incumbents Ald.
Malcolm Anderson and Ald.
Bill Tindall joined Young in listing some of the present council's achievements and its aspirations for areas such as James Bay, Victoria West, the downtown core and the Inner Harbor.

They said they would welcome the chance to carry on some of the key plans and time provement projects already begun, and Young singled out housing as a priority problem to tackle in the next two

Ironsides Role Copied Sweet, Sour Franks

Rowe has never been one to begrudge his fate. During the Second World War he was crippled by a wound and has adapted well to his handicap. He's always been a keen traveller but getting in and out of his car was a problem. That is until the television de-tective series Ironside came to the screen about three years ago.

In the series, Ironside, a crippled detective, uses an au-tomatic hydraulie lift to manoeuvre his wheelchair in out of his van. Stan seized on the idea. He got in touch with the company which manufac-tures the lift, bought a new van, and with the help of his retired father Walt, installed the device.

Since then Stan, 47, and Walt, both diabetics, have started to fulfil their ambition to travel.

Since last year they've clocked up 19,000 miles, including a trans-Canada camping trip lasting three months earlier this year.

Once or twice they ran into snags, however. Like the time a car ran into the side of the van, jamming the lift and the doors. Stan was pinned inside for two days while the device was repaired.

Winter meant hibernation for Stan until he followed Ironside's lead. Now, he says, he can travel at will despite his handicaps.

He feels he has shown that handicaps such as being crip-pled and diabetic can be considerably lessened. Many peo-ple in his position "give up and think they can't go any-where," he says.

That just isn't right.' The lift device is manufactured by a company in Cal-gary and sells for $800. All the parts can be bought in hardware stores if they need replacing and the lift is easily installed Stan says.

STAN ROWE, crippled by a wound during the Second World War and confined to a wheelchair, is getting around thanks to a TV series. Getting in and out of his car was a problem until the television series Ironside came to the screen. # Drugs Hurt Sleep

MONTREAL (CP) - An Ottawa scientist engaged in sleep research says drugs prescribed to induce sleep "are mostly terrible and actually deteriorate the quality of sleep." Dr. Roger Broughton, associate professor of medicine and pharmacology at University of Ottawa, said in an interview there are five different stages of sleep.

Four of these stages are "slow-wave" or restful sleep and the fifth is rapid eye movement or REM sleep. Both are

The brain waves produced during REM sleep are similar to the waves produced when a person is awake.

Broughton said that drugs can hinder or destroy these stages of sleep and thus interfere with at least four body hormones—including the growth hormone—which are only produced when a person is in slow-wave sleep. Hyperkinetic over-active children who are given amphetamines to slow them down are often smaller than average.

"and this may be because the drug affects slow-wave sleep and so inhibits the production of growth hormones."

Barbiturates, often prescribed to persons having trouble getting to sleep and also administered routinely in many hospitals, affect both slow-wave and REM sleep.

When a person is withdrawn from barbiturates, he is likely to suffer increased insomnia and REM rebounds-associated with nightmares and agitated sleep.

Price of Wool Levelling Off

By WAYNE HARDING Times Staff

A levelling off in the price of woollen fabrics — which have increased by as much as 25 per cent in the past year — is predicted by industry spokesmen.

They say prices should begin to hold steady at the retail level within the next month and the trend should be evident in the price of ready-to-wear made of woollen fabric by the first months of the new year.

Charles Jackson of E. E. Schenck Co. Ltd., a Van-couver-based fabrics wholesaler, said the full effect will wool, like cotton, has been rising steadily for the past 18 months as a result of manipulations of the market at producer level, he points out. The two major causes of the increase have been the deva-luation of the dollars — critical to the Canadian woollens because Canada produces less than five per cent of its own raw material and cutbacks in Australian

Devaluation affected the rice of both woven fabric, price of both woven fabric, much of which comes from the United Kingdom, and the price of raw wool, most of which comes from Austra-

Two years ago, declining wool prices furced the Austra-lian government to stockpile the product and subsequently producers cut back production which is being felt now.

Japanese manufacturers tors on the international wool market and their demand has forced prices up. But the in-fluence of the Japanese has not been as significant on wool as it has been on cotton and polesters.

At the other end of the market, retailers have noticed a gradual increase in the price of woolen fabric rather sudden sharp increases which have been typical of price trends in cotton fabrics.

Victoria yardgoods dealers estimate prices increases in the past year have ranged, according to fabrics, from 10 to 25 per cent. The smallest increases have been in the price of fabrics with a blend of wool and syn-thetics fibres. So called "washable woollens," have probably been the best buy in fabrics during this period.

The biggest increases have been in 100 per cent all-woollen fabrics imported from the United Kingdom

Native Compromise Works for Zambia

By WAYNE HARDING Times Staff

'One-party democracy" is working in many parts of Africa because it is derived from native tradition, says D. F. Summers, a Canadian teacher who has just returned from a four-year assignment in Zam-

In an interview with the Times while on vacation in Victoria this week, Summers defended the system of goveriment of Zambian president Kenneth Kaunda and other African leaders who have abandoned party politics yet resisted military dictatorship.

"Party politics was disas-rous" when independence came to Zambia in 1964, Summers claims. It's devisiveness threatened the young country.

"One's political forms have to rise out of one's whole cultural and political tradition and the party system came from British rather than African tradition.

The so-called "one-party demoracy" is derive from the tradition in which every member of the community has his say and the final decision is made by a leader who has taken into account the diverse views.

It is autocratic in that the final decision is made by one man or a very few men, but it is democratic in that every-one is given an opportunity to participate," Summers says. He claims this particular form of African democracy has saved a number of countries from falling into military dictatorship which has often come about because party systems failed to work.

A minister of the United Church, Summers was dean of studies with the Mindolo Ecumenical Foundation in Kitwe. Most of his students were trade unionists taking leadership courses.

The Zambian labor movement found itself almost com-pletely devested of trained leaders in the years following independence, Summer ex-plained, because so many of these people went into government service.
The Mindolo Foundation has been active in helping to re-build union leadership.

Summers also worked with trainees in the co-operative movement which is making major strides in Zambia with official encouragement after many false-starts in the years immediately after indepenimmediately after indepen-dence. Difficulties in starting co-operatives and credit unions arose at first, Summers says, not because people were irresponsible but because "the economics of the cash system itself" were not widely understood. Today Zambia is in the forefront of Black African states in economic and politi-cal growth, Summers feels.

Industrialization has reached the point where about one-third of the population has left the land, mostly to find employment in the cop-per industry. There is a large native middle class and dire poverty is rare.

Still rapid industrialization has also brought major social problems. The new cities are plagued with "the whole gamet of social ills". A strong member of the Organization for African Unity, Zambia has close relations with the national liberation movements in Rhodesia, the Portuguese colonies and South Africa.

Zambia, once called Northern Rhodesia, has very deli-cate relations with Rhodesia. tacts between the peoples and

The "fairly large number of Zambians who are politically aware" recognize Rhodesia must not be given cause for reprisals against Zambia for the aid and comfort it gives Rhodesian black nationalists.

LONDON (Reuter) Women who choose not to breast-feed their children for fear of losing their figure run the risk of getting fat, a British doctor warned Monday.

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) - Fifteen people were stranded for eight hours on a Mackenzie River Ferry last weekend when the ferry's engine became clogged with ice, a spokesman for the territorial government said Monday.

Snowfall Signals Last Call for Bulbs

Gardeners caught by the weekend snow with plants, bulbs and other hardy things still out of the ground are advised to get them in as soon as possible. The soil must be free of frost and cleared of snow where the plants are put in. In the meantime, don't keep hardy plants in garage, basement or other dry place; and don't expose roots to frost, sun or wind. Keep them outdoors. Dry sacking, leaves, sawdust or soil heaped around rootballs in sacking, or containers will prevent this happening.

Water will be needed to drive out harmful air pockets and take down the soil particles into the spaces. You'll see bubbles rising to the surface so long as air pockets remain.

Finish the surface with a slight mound at this time of year instead of a saucer. The soil will sink by spring.

Next deal with shrubs having rootballs of soil wrapped in burlap or plastic. For acid loving types, have a big can of peat moss dampened and mixed with water, using a small garden fork.

garden fork.

Only when you have seen dry peat moss in the soil after a winter's rains do you believe the necessity of thoroughly dampening it before putting it into contact with plant roots.

Mix compost soil with the well dampened peat moss about 50-50, then mix this into the soil of the planting hole and work it around the rootball.

Remember that most acid loving shrubs are inclined to be surface rooting, therefore must not have the rootballs deeply buried. More camellias and rhododendrons fail to flower and flourish from too-deep planting than possibly any other cause except drought in early spring and early fall.

The general rule for depth of planting shrubs is to look for the soil level mark on the branches. You can find this on either plants due from purseey yours or on these taken from ther plants dug from nursery rows or on those taken from

And about containers—take off any and all kinds of containers. The plant roots must be free to go into the good soil you provide. A tight rootball sometimes needs pressing with the palms of the hands to free the feeding roots which have made their way to the perimeter of the rootball.

With all plants snugly in the soil there is little more to be done to protect the hardy ones. They are the dependables, if

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, we have an example of simple, intelligent defence which resulted in the defeat of South's game con-tract. Had the deal arisen in a lower echelon game, South would, in all likelihood, have fulfilled his contract, for the defensive play would probably have been below par. Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

NORTH ♦ J 5 4 ♥ A K J 8 ♦ Q86 AAQ3

WEST EAST ♦72 ♥Q953 ♦ A ♥ 10 6 2 OAK 10954 03 # K87542 # J 10 9. SOUTH

♦ K Q 10 9 8 6 3 ♥ 7 4 0 172 The bidding: East South

West North Pass 4 4 Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of .

On West's opening lead of the diamond king, East fol-lowed with the three and South with the deuce. It is evident that West could now have defeated the contract by cashing the diamond ace and then leading a third diamond for East to ruff.

But, from West's position, to have led the ace of dia-monds at trick two could have (in theory) turned out to be costly, for East might have started with the tripleton J-7-3 of diamonds, with South possessing the singleton deuce. In this case, the lead of the diamond ace would be ruffed by South; and, simultaneously, with dummy's queen would become a winner.

So, at trick two, West shifted to the club jack, dummy's ace taking the trick. On this trick East did not play the card most non-expert players would have played, namely the eight-spot as a "come on" signal. Instead, he followed with the deuce of clubs: "no interest in clubs, partner."

To trick three, declarer led dummy's jack of trumps, West capturing this lead with pelessness of continuing clubs (in view of his partner's negative signal), and seeing no fu-ture in hearts, what was there to do but fo lay down the diamond ace? When East dis-carded a club on this lead, West made haste to lead another diamond for East to

It is apparent that if East had given a "come on" signal at trick two by playing the eight of clubs, West, when he obtained the lead at trick three with his ace of trumps, would have returned the tea of clubs — which declarer would have ruffed. Had this come to pass, East would never have gotten around to ruffing a third diamond lead.

Thus the consequence of intelligent reasoning on the part telligent reasoning on the part of the defenders (especially East) brought about the "par" result: four spades was

The Honourable David Barrett Premier, Province of British Columbia Parliament Buildings Victoria, B.C.

Dear Mr. Barrett:

I am certainly in sympathy with thoughts expressed in the brief recently presented to you by the British Columbia Golf Association relative to tax relief for golf courses in the Province.

Every golf course in our area is virtually saturated! We need more golf courses to accommodate those of us who want to participate in this healthy, outdoor activity. We cannot afford to see our present golf courses turned into housing developments. They are a very valuable ecological asset to our area.

As an individual golfer, I cannot afford to pay the increased cost for each round of golf I play if the total tax increases are passed along

We need our large green belts just to keep breathing. Please treat our golf courses the same as you plan to do our farm lands and parks.

Yours very truly,

Strike Wave Hits Britain

LONDON' (CP) - Britain was hit Monday by a round of strikes which many union and civic officials warn is but a foretaste of what promises to be a long, cold and troubled winter, particularly in the London area.

Sir Reginald Goodwin, head of the Greater London Coun-cil, says the combination of a critical shortage of workers and low pay has in fact al-ready placed London's vital services in danger of collapse.

"Education, law and order, housing and health, these hallmarks of our civilization, are under threat," he said, and many others agree the situation is bleak.

London already faces disruptions in its fire and ambulance services, dozens of schools have been put on parttime because of a shortage of some 263 teachers, the police force is drastically under-manned and a number of subway stations have been closed for want of workers. Hundreds of city buses await repairs in under-staffed garages. Scores of traffic lights don't function.

The London situation is due to two major factors: the high cost of living here which encourage workers to seek jobs in other centres, and the low unemployment rate which leaves the manpower pool virtually empty.

The one-day strike Monday of engineering workers hit the motor industry and shipyards lication of the eight national daily newspapers and many strong union struck to protest a $187,000 fine for refusing to attend an industrial court hearing, most of the threatened industrial actions are over pay and bonuses. Some 20,000 post office clerks went on strike at midday in support of wage claims and the city fire department—already 500 men short has been warned firefighters will answer only emergency calls soon if their pay demands are not met. Labor-controlled Greater London Council blames the anti-inflation poli-cies of the Conservative government, saying the freeze on already-low salaries amid increasing living costs is causing workers to flee London. Most city workers get a cost-of-living bonus to help meet higher costs here but the teachers, for instance, say the annual $295 comes no-where near filling the gap. Teachers' salaries range from $3,250 to $8,000, and many have been moving to other centres where, they say, the pay is similar, working conditions better, pressures less and living costs — particu-larly housing — far cheaper. Meanwhile, some areas have already experienced power cuts — with the threat of more to come — as the 30,000-strong electrical power engineers union imposed a ban on overtime in support of wage demands. The big coal miners' union has a meeting

'Many Obstacles' To Gulf Park

before such a plan can be-come reality, a prominent senior provincial parks official said today. >
A task force composed of Canadian and U.S. expérts has recommended to the International Joint Commission that key areas be bought in both the Gulf and San Juan Islands for park-purposes and green belts established.

It was also recommended that development be restricted on the Canadian and American islands.

"But there are some pretty touchy and complicated problems to be resolved before such a park can be created," the parks man said. "For example, there is the question of purchases and how is the whole area to be administered. Another problem is who is to manage the waters in the Strait of Georgia.'

He said the park proposal would not only involve the federal and U.S. govern-ments, but the province, regional and county govern-

"Whether this proposal goes any farther than the Interna-tional Joint Commission will depend on public reaction,' he stated.

Public meetings on the proposal are scheduled in Point Roberts Dec. 4; Vancouver Dec. 5; Victoria Dec. 6 and Seattle Dec. 7.

DUNCAN - The establishment of a community re-sources board will be discussed by 20 representatives of Cowichan Valley service organizations at a meeting in the Cowichan Opportunity Centre at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Jack Hutton of the Duncan Mental Health Centre said such a board could include development of a complete network of social services, all locally controlled.

"What we are trying to do is to bring about more com-munity involvement," he said. "With a community resources board, the local area could have the responsibility for establishing programs and

Point Park Opposed

BELLINGHAM, (AP) - Watcom County com missioners said Monday they oppose a plan for an international park that would include Point Roberts, Wash.

They referred to a new group calling itself U.S. Citizens of Point Roberts, which has pledged to campaign for a plan to make the U.S. appendage below British Columbia part of an international park.

The Whatcom County board of commissioners issued a statment saying the ramifications of such a plan are "beyond comprehension."

The commissioners said the problems of the constitu-tionality of governing resi-dents of the area should be pointed out.

The idea of a Canadian park came from the International Joint Commission, which said the plan would be a solution to the "foreseeable danger of envi-ronmental degradation" resulting from anticipated population growth.

Saanich Bylaw Debated Friday

A public meeting to discuss Saanich's $4.1 million capital projects referendum will be held Friday at 8 p.m., spon-sored by the Prospect Lake District Community Associa-

Saanich council representatives will meet ratepayers in the Prospect Lake community hall at 5358 Sparton.

The capital projects include a senior citizens' activity centre, an arena, storm drains and the reconstruction of several major roads in the municipality.

Show Spirit Vale Told

Strawberry Vale residents were asked by Saanich council Monday to show more mu-nicipal community spirit after they pressed for a swimming pool and other improvements in their area.

In a letter to council, members of the Strawberry Vale school auxiliary said they were "very unhappy" that a swimming pool in or adjacent to the proposed Saanich community school had not been included in the referendum to be voted on

The referendum calls for expenditure of $4,365,000 on and drainage work.

On a separate ballot taxpayers will vote on a $250,000 au-ditorium for the school.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said residents must think of the community as a whole and decisions must be based on population densities.

The residents pointed out that a 1972 survey had placed the swimming pool highest on the list of priorities. They also felt their area had been neg-

ANTIFREEZE RUNNING OUT

Shortages of antifreeze and snow tires have already begun to affect Victoria dealers.

"I haven't really been able to buy it (antifreeze) for three weeks," said Wayne Wrigley of Douglas St. Mohawk service station.

When he was able to buy it, he said, the wholesale price was 75 cents more than last year's retail price.

"We have found it difficult to buy antifreeze," said Larry Glowasky of Fairfield Plaza service station

Union Carbide and Dupont, two of the big antifreeze suppliers, said in Vancouver they have been sold out for the past month and the only available stocks are on retailers' shelves. "There is a serious shortage of ethylene brought about by the energy crisis," a spokesman for one of the companies

"The only alternative when supplies run out is to drain the radiator, or bundle it up with blankets and overcoats."

A Vancouver tire distributor said the situation is even more serious for snow tires for imported cars.

THREE-STAGE To Arabs RATION PLAN FOR CANADA

Times New Service

OTTAWA — Energy Min-ister Donald Macdonald out-lined Monday a three-stage oil rationing program that the government will implement if needed this winter. He told the Commons supply interruptions have not oc-curred yet and the govern-ment does not know if the program will be required in whole, in part, or at all. But it is being prepared as a pre-

Macdonald also said the oil and gasoline supply situation should have clarified sufficiently by Nov. 23 to enable the government to decide whether emergency rationing measures will be necessary

The first stage would be limited to voluntary conserva-tion measures by citizens, government and industry. It would be started the moment demand outstrips supply and could cope with a shortage of 10 per cent or less.

Beyond a 10-per-cent short-age a "mandatory allocation program" would start at the wholesale level, obligating dealers to reduce deliveries to centage equivalent to the sup-ply short-fall."

Mayor Peter Pollen didn't attend. And that just may have been the wisest decision he's made during his entire two-year term of office.

The so-called all-candidates meeting at the Newcombe Auditorium Monday night was strictly one to miss. The sort of occasion that leaves one reeling from a massive over-dose of boredom, orgy of fireworks.

In Britain the bonfire revellers were out in force, ob-serving November the Fifth with the traditional burning of Guy Fawkes' effigy and an orgy of fireworks.

But meanwhile, back at the Newcombe, the entire 90-minute meeting didn't generate enough friction to ignite one mini-sparkler.

True, a clash of dates didn't help. As Kenneth Lines, president of the sponsoring James Bay Community Association pointed out, there was a compointed out, there was a compointed out, there was a com-peting event that evening at the nearby James Bay United Church. Was he, though, just a little too kind in finding excuses for a turnout of less than 30?

There was no other heckling. The only sign of audience reaction, apart from themandatory polite clapping as each candidate's name was each candidate's name was called, was a sort of disbeliev-ing gasp when Bitterman suggested public facilities such as the McPherson Play-house and Memorial Arena be closed down if they can't make money.

Fellow-incumbents Ald. Malcolm Anderson and Ald. Bill Tindall joined Young in listing some of the present council's achievements and its aspirations for areas such as James Bay, Victoria West, the downtown core and the

FIVE-YEAR BAN

FOR PITLAMPING

Recreation Minister Jack Radford has announced a stiffening of penalties for offenders of hunting regulations.

Persons convicted of "pitlamping" (hunting at night with a gun and a light) will have their hunting and firearms li-cences cancelled for five years. The existing penalty, which will be continued, is a $1,000 fine or 90 days in jail or both. Radford said the director of the fish and wildlife branch will have discretionary power to cancel licences, a power which will be used more often in the future.

legislature today began investigating whether Transport Minister Robert Strachan lied to the house over a manage-ment study of B.C. Ferries.

Its first witness was Lang-ley Socred Bob McClelland

The Socred refused to withdraw the accusation when asked by Speaker Gordon Dowding, and was ejected from the chamber for the remainder of the afternoon sit-

At the start of the evening sitting a motion was in-troduced to set up the inves-tigating committee, consisting of seven government and four opposition members.

Despite angry protests that the government was trying to silence McClelland, who had returned to the house with documents he said would substantiate his charge, the motion passed.

The vote on the motion was 35 to 12, with Liberal Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) and the lone Conservative in the house, Scott Wallace (Oak Bay), sup-

Members of the special committee are: from the gov ernment — Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, Recreation Minister Jack Radford, Carl Liden, Don Lockstead, Karen Sanford, Daisy Webster and Gerry Anderson; from the op-position — Socreds Jim Cha-bot and Ed Smith; Liberal Allan Williams; and Conservative Scott Wallace.

Macdonald also said the oil and gasoline supply situation should have clarified sufshould have clarified sufficiently by Nov. 23 to enable the government to decide whether emergency rationing measures will be necessary.

The first stage would be li-mited to voluntary conservation measures by citizens, government and industry. It would be started the moment demand outstrips supply and

He said he does not know if ration cards have been print-ed yet, but they would be "a wise precaution" because of the time needed to put such a program into operation.

An energy department spokesman made clear that any rationing at this stage would only apply to oil, and not to natural gas or other forms of energy not in short supply.

At the voluntary stage, federal, provincial and commer-cial buildings would cut temperatures three to five degrees and ventilation and air conditioning systems would be adjusted to lower the drain on heating fuel.

$200 Becomes $200,000

OAKVILLE, Ont. (UPI) -Police today issued a nation-wide alert for a 24-year-old American who apparently collected $200,000 because of a banking error on a $200 draft his mother had sent him from Virginia.

Police said they had nothing more than "speculation" to go on in tracing the whereabouts of James Garrett of Lynchburg, Va.

Garrett's windfall came Friday, Oct. 26, according to Robert Kerr, the owner of a car dealership who hired Garrett a day earlier as a sales-

Police and Kerr reconstructed the bank's error this way: They said the man's mother in Lynchburg went to the First Merchant's National Bank there after receiving

The draft for $200 was transferred from that bank to the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City. Chase Manhattan in turn got in touch with the New York office of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

"It was at this point the error apparently took place," said Kerr. "The people at Chase Manhattan apparently phoned the department for large money transfers rather than the small ones. It was assumed that two hundred meant two hundred thousand."

The Oakville branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia called Garrett to tell him he had $200,000 waiting for him in an American note. The Oakville branch refused to cash the note. Garrett took it to the headquarters of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Toronto. There he was given $20,000 in U.S. currency and another.

bank note for $180,000.

On the following Monday, Kerr said. Garrett went back to the same bank and got $79,000 more. Then on the same day he flew to Montreal and obtained $100,000 in travellers' cheques

The Arab policy of using oil as a political weapon paid off today as Japan and the Common Market countries issued statements backing the Arab cause

Japan, facing a loss of 40 per cent of its entire oil imports due to the Arab oil prooution cutback, urged immediate Israeli withdrawals to territory held before the 1967 Middle East War.

The Japanese cabinet took the action at the request of Foreign Minister Masayoshi-Obics

The sources in the Ministry of International Trade and In-dustry said cuts in electricity and oil rationing will force all Japanese industries to cut production and will put the untry's international trade balance in the red. In Brussels, in an attempt to prevent further Arab oil cuts, the nine European Com mon Market countries called on Israel to pull back to the Oct. 22 Middle East ceasefire

The Common foreign ministers also urged that any Middle East peace agreement be based on the 1967 United Nations resolution calling for Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory it oc-cupied in the 1967 war.

The ministers recognized the UN and its Security Council as the proper forum for dealing with the Middle East question and called for respect of the rights of Pales-

Gov't Urged To Absorb Hike

The B.C. government will be asked to absorb higher prices for reinforcing steel in government construction work already under way, Wayne Farmer, president of the B.C. Construction Association, said today.

Farmer said the association will meet Premier Dave Barrett this week to seek a solution to a cost squeeze on steel The squeeze began when Western Canada Steel Company raised the price of reir forcing steel, affecting exist-ing construction contracts. Farmer said he held talks Monday with M. C. D. Hobbs, chairman of Western Canada Steel, and found the company could legally increase its prices at this time.

"Therefore the increased costs will have to be absorbed by the owners or distribu tors," Farmer said.

Before deciding upon its next step, the contractors want to talk to Premier Barthe major employer of construction labor, Farmer

If he agrees to absorb the higher price for steel, con-tractors will approach other owners to see if they will agree to amending existing contracts to account for higher prices of reinforcing

Another option open to the contractors is to take legal action against distributors who buy from Western Canada Steel and contract to deliver it at a set price to contractors.

While the contractors might win the law suit, some distrib-utors might not be able to pay the large amounts involved and the construction association was reluctant to adopt that approach, Farmer said.

He estimated that increased prices for reinforcing steel could add up to $100,000 to the price of large existing con-Farmer said Western Canada Steel has the option to increase its prices with each new steel rolling, about every three months.

He said he had been con-cerned that a shortage of reinforcing steel was resulting from exports by Western Canmarkets.
